CONFERENCE AT HOLDENVILLE

METHODISTS IN SESSION—REV.
C. L. BROOKS ELECTED SECRETARY.

Holdenville, Okla., Nov. 20.—(Special)—The sixty-seventh session of the East Oklahoma conference of the M. E. church, South, met this morning at 9 o'clock with Bishop W. A. Candler of Atlanta, Georgia, in the chair. Rev. C. L. Brooks of Ada, was elected secretary and editor of the conference minutes.

The attendance is large and many others will arrive later. Already several places are asking for the next meeting of the conference and much friendly rivalry will develop among the bidding cities.

The appointments will probably be read Sunday evening or Monday morning.

Ada May Get Conference.

This afternoon in a phone conversation with the News, Rev. Chas. L. Brooks stated that Ada's chance of securing the next meeting of the East Oklahoma Conference is most excellent and with a little help from Ada people he is confident of success.

DEATH SENTENCE FOR NEW YORK GUN MEN

New York, Nov. 19.—"Gyp the Blood," "Leffy Louie," "Whitey" Lewis and Dago Frank Cirofki, the gunmen, charged with killing Herman Rosenthal, were all found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury in the supreme court this afternoon. The jury deliberated only one hour and ten minutes.

The quick verdict came as a surprise to everybody. The jury in the case of Charles Becker deliberated for nearly seven hours before reaching a verdict. He is now in Sing Sing sentenced to the electric chair for having instigated the murder.

Justice Goff remanded the prisoners until 10:30 a.m. tomorrow when he will fix the day for pronouncing sentence.

The gunmen heard the verdict with faces unmoved.

On the way back to their cells the convicted men, except "Whitey" Lewis, walked erect; Lewis went with bowed head.

THE GOVERNOR AND THE SCHOOLS

Supt. T. F. Pierce Pays Respects to Opinions Advanced by Governor or Cruce.

It is said that the best time to study electricity is during a thunder storm. Hence my reason for wishing to give expression to my ideas on maintaining all the normal schools. I read Gov. Cruce's speeches made during his campaign, also his message to the legislators. In many of his ideas I agree with him. In some I do not.

What I shall say here is in regard to his attacks upon the normal schools. I wish to state also that at present too much can not be said through and by the press over the country to repudiate the governor's false ideas in regard to the state normals. Because he is seeking to get his message into the hands of the constituency of the law makers before the legislature meets, in order that they may bring pressure to bear upon the legislators when the legislature meets. That is all right if the pressure is not brought to bear at the wrong place.

Now, let us see. The governor is advocating abolishing three of the state normals. Why? He says because they are not normals and because the attendance is not sufficient to warrant their existence, and that they are burdensome to tax payers. Every child knows that a normal is a place for training teachers. The curriculum of the normals of this state is just a little higher than the average state normal, and the teacher who finishes it under specialists is splendidly equipped for teaching in the public and high schools of any state. So much so, that about 23 states in the

Sharpening Probe for Money Trust.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 20.—Members of the sub-committee appointed by the House committee on banking and currency to investigate the so-called money trust rounded up in the capital today pursuant to the call of Chairman Pujo. The meeting is to map out plans for the future procedure of the investigating committee. Much work remains to be done before the taking of testimony can be resumed. Under the direction of Samuel Untermyer, one of the chief attorneys of the committee, experts have been at work all summer preparing an elaborate compilation of statistics embracing practically every financial and industrial institution in the country, and tracing the relation of each individual concern to other concerns. Before resuming the taking of testimony the committee will carefully review this compilation of figures which will be used as a basis for the examination of witnesses with a view to determining the excess influence exerted by New York banks and bankers on other banks and bankers throughout the country.

ROBBERS HOLD UP

TRAIN IN IOWA

Ottumwa, Ia., Nov. 19.—Two robbers held up passenger train No. 12 on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway here last night between Mystic and Ottumwa and obtained loot amounting to about $350.

A. Young, a passenger from the west, gave up $80 in cash and a diamond ring valued at $150. J. G. Zook, his companion, was robbed of $72.35. The robbers boarded the train at Mystic, 39 miles south of Ottumwa. As the porter, J. Robinson, was closing the vestibule doors of the observation car a revolver was pointed at his head and he was robbed of $5.35. The porter was then compelled to lead the way through the car. The first passengers met were Young and Zook.

Leaving the observation car, the robbers proceeded to the sleeper where Pullman Conductor Davis gave up $29.80 and a diamond stud. Brakeman Wells was also searched but his pockets were empty.

The remaining twenty miles into Ottumwa found the robbers riding the platforms of the observation and sleeping car, holding off the passengers in each car and making their escape when the train reduced speed at the Market street crossing in this city.

The police department and the sheriff's office with bloodhounds are searching for the robbers. Four suspects have been arrested.

U. S. have agreed to grant state certificates on the diplomas from the normals of Oklahoma. So it seems that these 23 states have recognized these six schools as real normals, regardless of the governor's opinion as to their not being normals.

Again the governor says that it imposes an unnecessary and heavy tax upon the people. Let us see. I have before me my tax receipt of 1911 taxes. It is $63,50, not counting my sewer tax. This is on about $2,000 worth of property. I think I am above the average tax payer in the state of Oklahoma. My share of the taxes to maintain the three normal schools the governor is seeking to eliminate is 25 cents on the $1,000 or 50 cents for my total. I have never uttered a word of complaint at paying 50 cents to maintain the three normals. The governor is wanting to reduce that is less than one cent per week.

Why Governor Cruce is trying to deprive me of paying this to the interest of education, and at the same time recommending over $1,000,000 appropriation for a state capital, I can't understand. Oklahoma City has promised to look after the capital building, and the tax payers will find pleasure in taking care of the schools.

The governor is unfair with the tax payers by trying to deceive them, in telling them that this tax to maintain the state schools is burdensome when it cost a great deal less than what it costs to maintain the schools.

What constitutes a normal? It is a course of study so adapted and regulated that when completed will qualify its graduates to become professionally trained teachers. And, also, including shorter courses giving instruction for professional training.

The old idea of a normal was first to become educated, and then enter a normal school for professional training. But under the new order and arrangement, the prospective teacher gets the education and professional training at the same time. It is ridiculous to think that one must finish a high school course, or college course and then enter a normal for professional training to carry Gov. Cruce's idea as to what a normal is.

The governor is also making fight on the normals because of the percent of attendance. Why is the percent of attendance small? There are two or three reasons. First, the normals are newly established institutions, and have done well for their age. Second, they have no dormitories

SWEEPING DECISION

IN LIQUOR CASES
Muskogee, Ok., Nov. 20.—In a sweep decision handed down here today Judge Ralph E. Campbell of the Federal court held that it is no offense against any Federal statute to ship liquor from the western part of Oklahoma to the eastern part, and any and all indictments returned for introducing liquor into Eastern Oklahoma are held for naught, unless the indictment states specifically, and it is proven, that the liquor has been shipped in from outside the state. Following the decision over 300 indictments were dismissed.

Under this decision liquor can be shipped to the western part of the state and rebilled to the eastern part of the state and not be in violation of the federal law. But if the shipment is made direct to the eastern part of the state, which is known as Indian country, the man to whom it is consigned may be prosecuted.

PECULIAR CONDUCT OF POLLY'S QUEER VISITOR

By CLAUDETTE SISSON.

All night long Polly Witham had shivered under the sheets and at 4 o'clock when the eastern sky was a faint yellow and the birds were singing in the tall locusts she turned her face to the wall and slept for ten delicious minutes.

The screeching of the pump chain at the back door brought her trembling to the floor and she tiptoed to the window and looked out, her eyes heavy with weariness.

Before the pump stood a tall young man clad in spotless white yachting clothes. His fair hair was guiltless of covering. He was drinking water from a bright tin dipper.

Polly watched him with bated breath—as one watches an apparition, expecting it to vanish in thin air. But he did not vanish.

Polly raised the window a few cautious inches and spoke gruffly.

"Do you want anything?" she inquired inhospitably.

The stranger turned a pair of very blue eyes toward her. It was evident that he could not see her, but he stared at the shutter.

"Yes," he replied deliberately, "you may bring me half a cup of tea, half a cup of coffee and a few waffles." "Is that all?" murmured Polly meekly.

"And make haste, please," he added, waving a sun-burned hand toward her.

Polly locked the window and hastened to the kitchen which was a dark and deserted as any kitchen would be at 4:30 on a June morning with mistress and maid away from home.

Polly made a hot fire of pine kindlings, set on the waffle iron to heat, filled the tea kettle, and ran upstairs to dress. Her only thought was to feed and get rid of the queerly behaved stranger on the front porch.

Presently she groped her way through the smoke filled kitchen with a tray containing crisp waffles and butter, a cup of tea and a cup of coffee with the necessary sugar and cream. Cautiously she opened the back door and placed the tray on the bench outside. Then she relocked the door and hastened to the front window.

"Your breakfast is ready on the back porch," announced Polly through a crack of the window.

"Thank you," he said alertly, and hurried down the steps.

He stopped short at sight of the breakfast tray and shook his head. Then he grasped the coffee cup and poured half its contents upon the ground. He repeated the operation with the tea cup. Then he sat down on the steps and proceeded to consume the waffles, drinking first a swallow of tea and then a swallow of coffee. Suddenly he leaped to his feet, swept his cap off and addressed the kitchen door:

"Farewell, fair waffler!" he ejaculated, and stalked away.

Polly Witham watched until his tall form had disappeared down a wooded road that led to the village. Then she sat down on the floor and alternately laughed and cried.

Later in the morning she drove her little car down to the postoffice. As she passed the livery stable she noticed that the newly washed carriages were ranged along the curbstone.

On the front seat of a horseless surrey sat her visitor of the morning, a rose in his lapel. A lap robe was carefully spread over his knees and he was sitting very straight and staring right over the heads of the indignant liveryman and the village constable.

The constable rubbed his ear with a polished stick of authority. "Come down outer there, young feller," he rasped.

The stranger smiled patronizingly. "My good man, be good enough to come down half a cup of tea and half a cup of coffee," he said.

As the words died on his lips, the stranger's face grew pale and gaunt. His head drooped and he crumpled down on the seat.

"Ah!" cried impulsive Polly, as the little crowd of onlookers held back from assisting the stricken man. "Can't you see that he is ill? Help him into my car, constable—he's a friend of ours," she lied.

In a few moments Polly was racing toward home with the constable supporting the unconscious man in the seat beside her.

Late that afternoon a little party of yachtsmen called at the Witham home and inquired for Polly's invalid who had regained consciousness only to sink into a deep slumber. They explained to Polly that the stranger was Paul Amory, owner of the yacht Sea-drift, anchored in the bay below. Mr. Amory had been suffering from sun-stroke and had eluded his watchers and left the vessel in the night.

Two weeks later, long after Mr. and Mrs. Witham had returned home, Paul Amory, quite recovered from his illness, took his departure.

"Miss Polly," said Amory, "since I've been convalescent, I've been remembering some funny things that happened—before you befriended me that morning."

"Yes?" asked Polly, blushing a little.

"You are the fair waffler?" he smiled down at her.

"I am the waffler," admitted Polly solemnly.

"And the half cups—were you not frightened?"

"I was—and yet it was funny, too." "Well—I wonder if you'll forgive men for all the trouble I've caused you and if you will let me return some day for the other half cups?" His hand closed over her small one.

"I hope you will," faltered Polly.

TRIBUTE TO PRINTERS. High Praise Bestowed on Typos by Noted Newspaper.

Of all skilled craftsmen the present day printers are unquestionably at the head in individual intelligence and in collective conservatism and fairness in their dealings with their employers. Their standard of unionism is probably higher than that of any other labor organization, and for that reason there is less friction between employee and employer than is the case probably with any other branch of organized labor. Individual instances of unfairness are uniformly condemned by the national and international authorities, and the "word" typographical union comes about as near being as good as its "bond" as that of any in the whole realm of organized labor.

The printer of today follows a trade that is not very far from a profession. It would be a reflection upon his intelligence if he did not avail himself of the educational opportunities that are inherent and inescapable in the course of his duties. The trade itself has progressed at a very rapid rate, and the mechanical status of the newspaper of today is as far superior to that of the paper twenty-five years ago as is the linotype compositor of today superior to the wandering "print" of the good old days.

The peripatetic "character" who has furnished uncounted columns of myth and fable, anecdote and yarn has, for the most part, passed away, and the modern printer is not the more or less merry roysterer who was wont to drift in on the brake-beam and drift out in the "side door Pullman." The modern printer is sober, industrious and gentlemanly. In this world his is the immortality that belongs to those who live among fellowmen enlightened and made better for their living, and as for the next world his comrades may "turn a rule" in reverent confidence that the best part of the "story" is to come.—Kansas City Journal.

RIT ERWIN,

County Treasurer.

P. S.—If you don't furnish list as required by law, when you write about your tax your letter won't be answered for I will not know what property you own, and if you don't have a list of your property when you come to pay your tax, the man who has his list will be waited on first and I will wait on you when there is no one waiting. TO MEET UNDER
TEN STAR FLAG

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 20.—Elated over the recent addition of four stars to their flag, hundreds of delegates to the forty-fourth annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, which meets tomorrow for a five days' session, are here today preparing to give to "the cause" the most notable impetus since the inception of the equal franchise movement. The women have come from every section of the country and are among the leaders in their respective states. The hotels are filled with them, and many others of the delegates are being entertained in private homes.

The program prepared for the gathering provides for many novel and attractive features. Witherspoon Hall, where the most of the sessions will be held, has been handsomely decorated for the occasion. The six-star flag, conspicuous at the former conventions of the organization, gives way this year to the ten-star flag, the four new stars representing the states of Michigan, Kansas, Oregon and Arizona, which adopted woman suffrage amendments at the recent elections.

A fine array of talent has been obtained to address the various meetings, consisting of prominent men and women who have become famous for their devotion and labor along different lines of human activity.

The meetings will vary in character from a great outdoor rally in Independence Square on the opening day to a thanksgiving service on Sunday afternoon in the Metropolitan opera house. All of the evening sessions will be open to the public.

At the formal opening of the convention tomorrow night Miss Jane Addams of Chicago will preside and the national president, Rev. Anna Howard Shaw, will deliver her annual address. Another feature of the evening's program will be addresses from leaders who aided the cause to victory in Arizona, Michigan, Oregon and Kansas.

The men enlisted in the equal suffrage cause will have their innings Friday evening.

The session will be in the entire charge of the National Men's League for Woman Suffrage and men only will appear on the program as speakers.

The program for the Saturday evening session will be conducted entirely by the National College Equal Suffrage League, of which Dr. M. Carey Thomas, president of Bryn Mawr College, is the head. Two debating teams made up of young women college students will engage in a debate on the subject of equal suffrage.

A special program has been prepared for the Independence Square rally tomorrow. The original Woman's Declaration of Rights will be read, and Mrs. Charlotte Peirce, the only living signer, will be present, and be formally presented with a bouquet of flowers.

The Sunday afternoon thanksgiving service in the opera house will probably be the largest indoor suffrage meeting ever held in this country. The background of the stage will be a huge world map, showing the progress of the suffrage movement up to date. All the suffrage territory will be painted in bright red. A band of sixty musicians will furnish the music for the meeting. Rev. Anna Howard Shaw will preside, and among the speakers will be Miss Jane Addams and Miss Julia Lathrop, the latter the newly appointed head of the Children's Bureau.

A mass of routine work will be disposed of at the daily business sessions of the convention. Reports will be received from the various national officers and committees and from delegates representing all of the states. These reports will embody a narration of the progress made during the past year, the plans of campaign found most effective and an exchange of ideas through debate.

The speakers who will be heard at the night sessions will include many persons of national or international prominence. In addition to those already named they will include Mrs. Harriet Stanton Blatch of New York, Miss Harriet Taylor Upton of Ohio, Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald of Boston, Mrs. Robert M. La Follette of Wisconsin, Baroness Von Suttner, the celebrated advocate of international peace, and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, who has just returned from an eighteen months' trip around the world.

The election of officers of the association for the ensuing year is a subject that is already exciting lively discussion among the delegates. Rev. Anna Howard Shaw of Philadelphia will be a candidate for re-election to the presidency and will be seriously opposed for the first time during the eight years she has held the office. The opposition has centered upon Miss Laura Clay of Kentucky as their candidate. The supporters of Dr. Shaw profess to feel no fear over the result of the contest.

JERRY FOUND THE GIRL

By JOHN CAINE.

Gerald Underhill drew in a deep breath of the air of Broadway, for it was the first time he had been in New York for almost eleven years.

While he was hesitating which way to turn, a crowd of people began pouring out of the Times Square subway station and a hand was laid familiarly on his shoulder.

"Jerry Underhill!" Tom Sandford laughed heartily. "Well, of all things! When did you get in from the Klondike?"

"About an hour ago. Gee, Tom, it is good to see you again!" Underhill beamed on his friend. "I only arrived about an hour ago and I'm lonely already."

"I'm sorry, old man," Tom gripped his hand fondly. "I'm late for a business engagement now or I'd stick with you all day. But come up to dinner tonight and we can talk it over. Here." Tom hastily scribbled the address on a card and handed it to Jerry. "Then we will expect you?"

Jerry smiled and thankfully accepted the invitation at once. Then in a serious manner he said:

"You don't know any nice girl who could marry a miner, do you?"

"I don't," then smiled knowingly, "but my sister Alice may. We can ask her about it tonight."

They shook hands again and parted. Jerry tucked the card safely in his pocketbook and turned his steps slowly up Broadway.

Dinner was over at the Sandfords', and Jerry, with a long cigar, sat listening to the plans being made for the finding of a wife for him.

"I shall expect you to call every afternoon at 5," Alice was saying, "and each day you will meet a new girl; and I will give you a month to choose. Thirty days, and thirty girls make your acquaintance. Is it a go?"

Jerry removed the cigar from between his lips and looked appraisingly at Tom's sister.

"Sure is!" he exclaimed. "But I want them to be as much like you as possible."

Alice blushed and Tom coughed knowingly, while Mr. Gerald Underhill resumed his smoking.

"I'll do my best, and each day I shall expect you to remain after the prospective wife has departed to report on progress."

Jerry agreed to all conditions imposed by Miss Sandford, and, feeling thoroughly happy and grateful, he took his leave.

For two weeks Mr. Underhill, in his best clothes, called at the Sandford home each afternoon at 5 o'clock. He met a new girl every day, as agreed and among the lot were some of the noted beauties of New York.

To Jerry they were all wonderful but none more so than Alice Sandford, who continued to charm him more as the days passed.

The allotted month had brought no decision and Jerry, at a loss what to say, sat awaiting the coming of Alice. A perturbed frown was on his hand, some face and a great unrest in his heart.

"I must say, Mr. Underhill, you are a disappointment to me," Alice, more vexed than she cared to admit, looked across the room at Jerry.

"I know I must be, and I'm truly sorry," he spoke earnestly; "but can I help it if I don't love any of the beautiful ladies?"

"No, I suppose not; but," a ray of hope had come to her, "do men always know when they are in love?"

"Maybe not." He rose, and came toward her. "You have been so good to me. I wish I could have wanted one of them for my wife." He took her hand. "Goodby; you see, I want ed a girl, and they all seemed so worldly, too wise for a western life."

She watched him get into the waiting taxi; then closing the door, walked slowly upstairs, and into her room.

Jerry told the driver to take him to the park, and to drive slowly. They had been in the park perhaps fifteen minutes, when suddenly he poked the driver in the back, and fairly shouted at him:

"Return at once to the house we just left. And, driver, don't lose any time."

When Mr. Underhill's card was brought to her, Alice looked at the maid inquiringly, and without giving any sign of her thoughts, descended at once to the library, where he waited.

"Alice!" The word was a caress, the more so as he held out his arms to her.

She paused and then quickly went to him—into the longing arms.

"Alice," he bent down until his head was close to hers, "why was I so blind? Here I've been loving you from the first moment I met you, and yet I never knew it before. You're such a womanly woman and still a girl." "Oh!" he sighed contentedly looking into her upturned face.

She half pushed him from her, but he quickly drew her back.

"You're going to marry me, aren't you?" he asked, fearfully.

"You are sure that you love me?" She smiled tenderly.

"Yes, sweetheart, very sure."

Then as she came closer he stooped and kissed her.

NO NEW TRIALS FOR ALLEN CLAN

Richmond, Va., Nov. 19.—A new trial was today refused Floyd Allen and his son, Claud Swanson Allen, by the Supreme Court of Virginia.

The men are condemned to die in the electric chair next Friday for the murder of the Carroll County Courthouse at Hillsville, March 14.

Floyd Allen was convicted for the killing of Commonwealth Attorney William Foster.

Allen's son, tried on the charge of killing Judge Thornton L. Massie, was convicted and sentenced to fifteen years in the penitentiary. A second trial on an indictment for killing Attorney Foster resulted in a conviction for murder in the first degree July 27th.

It is believed that Governor Mann will not interfere with the execution of the sentence imposed by the court. The appeal to the supreme court for new trials, decided adversely today, had been pending for some time, but Virginia officials have made arrangements for the execution of the men, believing that no clemency would be shown.

The Hillsville court house shooting in March, when the Allen clan resented the conviction of Floyd Allen on a minor charge is still holding at

The girl and her mother, Mrs. Cameron-Falconet, both of whom are witnesses against Johnson in the federal action for alleged violation of the Mann white slave act, were not in court when the city case was dismissed.

OTHER ELECTORAL VOTES.

Leaving California out of the reckoning entirely, Gov. Wilson has 440 votes in the electoral college and his opponents, combined, cannot muster as many as 100 votes against him. However, the count may terminate in the one or two doubtful states in which the result of Tuesday's election is still unsettled, Wilson has a ratio of more than four to one. Only Madison, Monroe and Pierce received such a majority on first election, not counting Washington, who received the total electoral vote, and only a few others received such a ratio in their second election.

In 1904 Jefferson was re-elected by a vote of 162 to Pinckney's 14.

Madison won his first term in 1808 by a vote of 122 to Pinckney's 47.

In 1816 Monroe won his first election by 183 to King's 34; he had no opposition for re-election but lacked one of the full electoral vote because an elector of New Hampshire desired Washington alone to enjoy the distinction of a unanimous election and voted for John Quincy Adams.

Jackson won his second term in 1832 by 219 to Clay's 49.

In 1840 William Henry Garrison went in with 234 votes to Van Buren's 60, not quite 4 to 1.

Pierce in 1852 received 254 to Scott's 42.

Lincoln was a 10 to 1 winner in his second term, 1864, but the Confederate states were then out of the Union. The vote was: Lincoln 212, McClellan 21.

Grant's second term, 1872, was won by 286 to 42 for Hendricks, but there were 38 other votes, making a total opposition of 80, among which were 17 votes for Greeley not cast because of his death.

In these cases the winner received a majority of the popular vote. Gov. Wilson is a plurality president on this reckoning, but in the electoral college he is in the class with Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Harrison, Lincoln and Grant.—Ex.

THE BOON OF THE MODERN CAMERA

In these days of the ubiquitous camera, having one's picture taken or "made" as the professionals say, is a simple, everyday affair, and no home need be without the counterfeit presentation of the features of its inmates or of views of the home itself, both from the inside and from the outside. It is a far cry to the days when the making of a portrait was a solemn and awful function in which only the rich, or at least the well-to-do, were privileged to indulge.

What family has not, somewhere among its possessions, some of the old-time pictures which were the forerunners of the present-day handsome black and white or sepia camera portraits. May be it is one of those real old-fashioned silhouettes of several generations back. Unsatisfactory as the silhouette was, it still had its charm, and the family nose or chin is shown up with a truthfulness which may or may not be flattering.

May be it is a daguerreotype which first came into fashion along about 1839. It was surely lifelike, even if the pose was a trifle stiff according to modern notions. Or perhaps an ambrotype, which was easier to see and which followed closely on the daguerreotype.

What a painful process was the "dressing up" for those old daguerreotypes and ambrotypes, to be sure. Best clothes were absolutely required, and very often the treasured possessions of each member of the family in the way of ribbons, jewelry, laces and other trinkets were freely offered to adorn the subject of the picture, as the startling array of gold flecks touching up brooches, earrings, chains, bracelets, etc., in the old pictures prove. How anxious were the members of the family to see if mother's pin, or father's watch chain or sister's locket "showed in the picture," and if the color and pattern of the "best dress" was discernible; and what was the disappointment when the pretty pink or blue came out a dingy drab. It could be colored, of course, but that meant more money and there was not always the extra amount to spare for mere coloring, if the picture was good.

Many of the early photographs were of soldiers; brave in the uniforms of '61-'65. There were not much like the larger pictures of today, yet the features were clear and distinct, and many of them are unfaded even after the lapse of a half century. They were dearly treasured by those who possessed them in those war days, and many of the soldiers carried pictures of their dear ones with them on the battle-fields. Babies were not very good subjects; it took too long to get a satisfactory picture of restless little ones, as a usual thing. The pictures of these days are excellent costume studies and anything that was in the least grotesque was sure to "show up" with startling clearness whether it was a feature or an article of dress. Everybody, almost, has collections of these old photographs, and wonders if there really were so many homely people in the world—for the art of posing and retouching was in its infancy.

Photography improved as time went on and the prices were made such that a photograph of some description was within the reach of everyone. In the '70's the tintype was popular and the traveling tintype wagon was ubiquitous. Then in the '80's, or thereabouts, came in the crayon picture, enlarged from photographs, good and satisfactory if made by a skilled hand with really artistic touch, but about as awful caricatures as can possibly be imagined in many cases.

One young matron, to whom a picture of a deceased brother-in-law had been presented by the family, said to her sister who noticed it: "Isn't that awful? I had to have it in the parlor at first, but I've managed to get it out here in the hall, and by and by I hope to be able to engineer it upstairs and let it gradually disappear from general sight. He died with consumption, anyway, and that picture is from one taken when he was sick, but he really didn't look as ghastly as that does." There were probably many others who would have been glad to follow the example of this young matron, had they dared risk hurting the feelings of those who presented such pictures.

IMPROVED COTTON CULTURE

Unimproved or common cotton yields from 28 to 33 1-3 per cent lint, or a 500-pound bale from 1500 pounds of seed cotton. Good cotton growers are no longer contented with this yield when it is quite possible to grow a 500-pound bale from 1250 pounds of seed cotton at no additional cost, except the start of pure bred seed and the practice of good cultural methods. At this rate the difference shows an increase of 100 pounds of lint, and 10 cents per pound gives a profit of $10 per bale.

The difference in the yield of lint from pure bred cotton and that received from the common cotton will always justify the grower in getting a start of pure bred cotton from the originator or grower of some recognized standard type, and continue the improvement of this type of cotton by seed selection along the lines followed by the originator.

It is easily possible to raise the general yield of lint. In a field of pure bred cotton on the College farm in 1911, planted from seed testing 37 per cent in 1910, it was easy to select cotton testing 42 per cent lint, and the crop of 1912 is planted from this seed.

Cotton seed selected from very heavy yielding, early maturing plants conform to a definite type will come nearer reproducing good cotton than seed from plants of irregular structure.

OFFERED AS A SUGGESTION

Various Ideas That May Be of Use to Those Who Intends Future Entertainments.

Breasted Birds—Small birds are exceedingly nice to broil. Dress, divide the birds in half, butter the gridiron (a double gridiron is best) and broil carefully so that both sides are a delicate brown; put on a hot platter, season with butter, salt and pepper and serve with buttered dry toast.

Smothered Birds—Prepare as for broiling. Put in boiling water for 10 minutes, remove, arrange in baking pan and season highly with salt and pepper, putting a lump of butter on each bird; pour in the pan a little water, to which has been added enough vinegar to give it a slightly sour taste; dredge the whole lightly with flour, cover with another pan and bake until done.

Roast Wild Duck—Parboil with an onion in each to remove the fishy flavor; use a carrot unless there is to be onion in the dressing; stuff with dressing for mallard; roast until tender, basting at first with melted butter, and then with the gravy in the pan. Weaken the gravy with boiling water, thicken with brown flour and stir in one tablespoonful of currant jelly. Serve separately.

Frogs—Skin and dress the frogs, removing the head and feet; wipe dry with a towel; roll in seasoned cracker or bread crumbs; fry in butter to a light brown.

Frog Legs—Scald the frog legs for just a moment, drain and dry; dust with salt and pepper, dip in beaten egg, then in rolled cracker crumbs, and fry quickly in hot oil.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

When sweeping a room open all windows and sweep toward the center of the room. This keeps dust from woodwork and walls.

To clean white and light colored plumes that are only slightly soiled gently rub them in a pan of equal parts of salt and flour.

When the tips of shoe laces pull off, twist the ends of the strings and dip into the glue bottle. When dry they are as good or better than new.

Add a sliced banana to the white of one egg and beat until stiff. The banana will entirely dissolve, and you will have a delicious substitute for whipped cream.

To insure a good light from oil lamps wicks must be changed as often as they become clogged and do not permit a free passage of oil. Soaking wicks in vinegar twenty-four hours before placing them in lamps aids in getting a clear flame.

With the Young Housekeeper. When cooking peas or squash or other green vegetables, add one teaspoonful sugar to each quart of water used. It will bring out the flavor of the vegetable and is very agreeable, especially with peas cooked with cream.

Hot chocolate, unsweetened wafers and crystallized prunes form a dainty course for luncheon or supper.

A friend who is an excellent cook tells me that she always puts into her sponge cake the grated rind of an orange and a tablespoonful or two of the juice. I have tried it with great success, says a contributor to Good Housekeeping. The cake has a delicious flavor and keeps moist almost indefinitely. I also put in lemon or vanilla extract as usual.

Peach Dumplings.

Pare, halve and pit six large, ripe peaches and place the halves together as they are cut. Make a dough precisely the same as for shortening, roll thin and cut with a large round cutter. Lay half a peach cut side up in the center of each, put a small bit of butter and three drops of vanilla in the center of each peach on the forms. Then place the remaining halves of the peaches in position, fold the dough over, roll gently in the hand to make ball shaped, lay the on a buttered plate, but not closely, set in a steamer and steam 20 minutes. Serve hot with peach or any sauce preferred.

Apple Cream.

Peel three pounds of apples, remove the cores and cut them in thin slices. Put them into a saucepan with one half pound of crushed sugar, the rind of a lemon finely shredded, one-half ounce of ground ginger and four tablespoons of red wine. Let them simmer until they are soft enough to press through a sieve, then put them in a dish and allow them to cool. Boil a quart of cream or new milk with some nutmeg, add the apples to it, beating all thoroughly. Time to simmer, about one-half hour. Sufficient for eight persons.

Hot Biscuit.

Required: Two cupfuls of flour, one cupful of milk or water, one heaping tablespoonful of lard or butter, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, and a pinch of salt. Mix the flour, salt and baking powder together, then work in the lard or butter; then the milk or water. Water is often preferable. Put in biscuit pans and bake for 20 minutes in a hot oven. This will make about 12 biscuits.

Salmon Souffle.

One can salmon, 1 1/2 cupfuls rich cream sauce, 2 tablespoonsfuls butter, whites of three eggs; mix salmon with cream sauce, fold in whites of eggs, pour in batter dish. Bake in slow oven.

Motherhood

The highest point of woman's happiness is reached only through motherhood, in the clasping of her child within her arms. Yet the mother-to-be is often fearful of nature's ordeal and shrinks from the suffering incident to its consummation. But for nature's ills and discomforts nature provides remedies, and in Mother's Friend is to be found a medicine of great value to every expectant mother. It is an emulsion for external application, composed of ingredients which act with beneficial and soothing effect on those portions of the system involved. It is intended to prepare the system for the crisis, and thus relieve, in great part, the suffering through which the mother usually passes. The regular use of Mother's Friend will repay any mother in the comfort it affords before, and the helpful restoration to health and strength it brings about after baby comes.

JEANETTE'S WORRY OVER HER HUSBAND'S CAREER

Sylvester was limping slightly as he approached the breakfast table but Mrs. Sylvester, having troubles of her own, did not comment upon it.

"I believe I must have a touch of rheumatism," she remarked, lifting the coffee pot wearily.

"Whatever that may be!" responded her husband scornfully. "The truth of the matter probably is that you got all tired out running up and down stairs when you were cleaning the attic yesterday."

"Oh, it certainly can't be that," she replied, "because you know, the doctors say now that running up and down stairs is the very best kind of exercise."

"The doctors!" he scoffed, trying as he spoke to find a comfortable position for his left leg. "If we are going to do all the fool things the doctors advise, or refrain from doing all the desirable things they forbid, we shall have a delightful time of it!"

"It grieves me to think," he continued, "how many good things I've missed because the doctors forbade them, only to be told a little later that it didn't make any difference, after all. I shall never cease to regret the rich red beefsteaks I didn't eat during a period when I fondly trusted in the assertion of the doctors that red meat caused rheumatism."

"They've found out now that it's strawberries," said Mrs. Sylvester. "I was reading an article yesterday, by a doctor—"

"No doubt you were," interrupted her husband. "It's just the time of the year that the medical fraternity would choose for the publication of an article denouncing strawberries—right in the season when they are the most tempting. Why, I had a dish for luncheon yesterday that made life seem worth living again. So the doctors have combined to deprive us of the solace of eating fresh strawberries, have they? Well, they can't work it on me this time! I'm a patient creature, but my patience has its limits. Not till I've forgotten the long dreary winter, during which I abstained from eating raw oysters for fear of typhoid, only to read in the first month of the year without an article by some noted medical man asserting that the percentage of typhoid due to oysters is so small as to be negligible."

"It's best to be on the safe side," said Mrs. Sylvester.

"The safe side, indeed!" he exclaimed. "Oh, certainly! You got a great deal of comfort out of being on the safe side when you used to arrange all the grape seeds so carefully along the edge of your plate. If you swallowed a single one by mistake you worried for weeks in fear of an attack of appendicitis! I don't notice you troubling much about grape seeds in late years. And why? Simply because your feminine credulity has been satisfied by the assertion of some doctor that grape seeds are not the cause of appendicitis, after all!"

Mrs. Sylvester began to look alarmed.

"We have been exhorted to wear flannels and not to wear flannels," he went on. "We've been admonished to drink water during meals, after having been solemnly warned never to do so."

"They do seem to change their minds pretty often," admitted Mrs. Sylvester.

Sylvester continued oratorically: "Each succeeding generation of doctors since the days of Aesculapius, or whatever his name was, has pronounced false the opinions of the preceding generation."

His wife looked thoroughly frightened. "It's perfectly dreadful!" she exclaimed. "I really never thought about it before."

"Ah-o-o!" groaned Sylvester, who had so far forgotten himself as to draw back his left leg quickly.

"What is it, Harry?" asked his wife anxiously. "Oh, I don't know what on earth we should do if you were to get sick, with the doctors all disagreeing and changing their minds every few minutes!"

"Nothing's the matter with me," he replied. "I was about to say, however, that, of course, the doctors are bound to hit it once in a while, and there may be something, after all, to that idea that strawberries cause rheumatism. I've been having a little pain in my left foot for a day or two, and as I've been eating strawberries every day for luncheon, I don't know but it might be a good thing to stop in on my way to the train and ask the doctor what he thinks about it."

"Do!" exclaimed Mrs. Sylvester, so interested that her own aches were forgotten. "It's so much more comfortable to be sure."

Last Omnibus in Paris.

Under the headline "It Was the Last" the Paris Matin tells the story of the passing of the last horse omnibus. The vehicle was one of the last to make way for the motor buses which now have no opposition except the trolley lines. The driver wore the uniform of a horse driver and the women who sat outside were dressed in deep mourning. Inside sat a company of newspaper men. All along the route followed by the "last of its family" the people cheered and sang, and "taken as a whole," says the writer, "it was a most notable function."

One Way to Live.

WHAT SAM THOUGHT

By BILLY BACHELOR.

Jeanette walked slowly up the path with an open letter in her hand and a puzzled frown on her pretty brow. Catching sight of me as I sat shaded by the honeysuckle that grew over the end of the porch, she smilingly said: "Oh, Cousin Bess, I'm so glad you are home. What can I do to help Jimmie with his career?"

"Goodness, child, what a question!

And how thoughtless of you to spring such a ponderous one on me this hot day!"

"I'll help you pare those peaches, even if the fuzz does make my blood run cold, if you will only tell me how to help Jimmie. His mother has written that she hopes I will have the proper consideration for my husband's progression and will help him with his career." If you were a young wife, Cousin Bess, wouldn't that stagger you?"

"Indeed would it. Wait a moment till I get you a paring knife and an apron, and we will see what we can do about it. I must get this basket of peaches ready to preserve before lunch time. Company coming to tea."

Settled again at work, I told Jeanette that the best way she could help Jimmie with his career was by serving him.

"Good gracious, you don't expect me to fetch and carry for him, do you?

I'm not his office boy."

"No, dear, you are not; but you can serve Jimmie quite well at home, helping his own loving little wife."

"Oh," breathed Jeanette.

"For example, although it may seem a trifling matter to you, you can help his career by studying his digestion.

When you have discovered what he likes and what diet suits him best, learn to cook his meals, so that you can instruct any new cook you may have how to prepare and serve them to please him best."

"To look after Jimmie's physical health means a great deal of care and attention, but to worry him about putting on rubbers and taking an umbrella if it threatens rain and to be continually fussing over him is a great mistake."

"Have the raincoat, umbrella and rubbers ready in the hall rack when you think he needs them. He will naturally make use of them without your having to say a word."

"Have the suit of clothes necessary for a change laid out for him and a sandwich, with a cup of hot broth, waiting for him if he is forced to work late at the office."

"Silence is a wonderful help to a tired man. All the little attentions to his physical comfort can be administered without any great flow of words, and a cup of beef tea placed silently beside him on his desk when he works at home will be more appreciated than if you spent twenty minutes in trying to persuade him to drink it.

"Save him from wasting time in interviewing troublesome callers. Offer to write his letters for him, especially those of a social nature, and business ones, too, if he will let you."

"Never trouble him with domestic worries. Let him think that the household runs as if on oiled wheels that scarcely ever creak. That means self-denial, but practice it."

"Learn to wear a smiling face, even if disaster threatens."

"You will often feel like crying with impatience when vexatious problems must be faced and cruel disappointments forgotten, but if you make up your mind to exert your self-control you will be able to smile and smile and smile."

"Don't let Jimmie be distressed and depressed by the sight of your tears."

"Remember there are two kinds of women—the one who takes the heart out of a man and the one who puts it back. The successful wife must be the one who restores the heart and energy to her husband when the fight against obstacles has been fierce and exhausting."

"Jimmie loves to play bridge and you loathe cards. Learn how to play and help him to enjoy that harmless recreation when he is worn with work."

"Do not allow a disparity of taste and sympathies. Interest yourself in Jimmie's hobbies as well as in his actual profession."

"But, Cousin Bess, his career. How can I help with his career?"

"Just by those little things. Don't see, dear, that by just smoothing out the rough places for him will give Jimmie more time and uninterrupted thought to give to the building of his own career."

"There, the peaches are all pared. Don't they look delicious? I will give you a jar when they are done. Thank you for helping me, dear."

"Thank you for helping me, dear Cousin Bess."

How He Feels About It.

There was one man in Indianapolis this week, who could appreciate the position of the man in the musical comedy, "A Modern Eve," who is the hen-pecked husband of a suffragette.

Whether the understanding one is a resident of the city or whether he is one of the state fair visitors remains a mystery, but he is not in sympathy with the suffrage leader depicted in the play. He was a diminutive personage with long, flowing whiskers and a very meek countenance.

The husband, who was dominated by his wife, had summoned sufficient courage to speak of the matter. His narrative of his troubles ended with the lines, "Now, I am tired of this, I am going to assert myself."

The audience applauded and the small man was especially elated. "Bullseye," he cried. The exclamation brought forth more applause than the lines.—Indianapolis News.

Exploration of a Flower.

Sometimes the floral spathes of a great palm tree will fly open with a sound like a detonation in a mine.

Such an event occurred in the botanical garden in Algiers recently. The spathes, nearly three feet long, was projected to a great distance, and for some moments the head of the palm tree was wreathed with golden dust formed of the debris of the flower. The sun's heat had roasted the flower to the color of rust. The director of the garden explained the explosion as being due to a fermentation in the flower caused by the extraordinary dryness of the air. A violet sirocco had just passed. In Algeria ostrich eggs explode in the same way and from a like cause.—Harper's Weekly.

First Masonic Lodge in Kansas.

A Poulet, a White Cloud banker, recalls that the first Masonic lodge instituted on Kansas soil, at Iowa Point, has a romantic history.

Smithton Lodge, No. 1, experienced numberless vicissitudes before the lodge was able to secure a permanent home.

The lodge was organized in 1854. The first meeting was held on one of the highest hills overlooking the Missouri river. The tyler was on horseback, scouting around to see that no intruder approached.

Sam hitched his chair up closer to mine, lighted his pipe and took a few slow inhalations before he replied by shaking his head slowly and pronouncing the one word, "Pique."

"It looks like it, I must admit," said I.

"And yet I gave Oscar credit for too much common sense to ever let him do a fool trick like that."

Beatrice turned him down, and he swore he would get even—

"Well, of all the—! It's a mighty queer thing, Sam, how men—and women—try to prove how little they really care for the person they once professed to love so deeply by turning around and marrying some one else. How the proving of themselves fickle-minded should give them one moment's pleasure, or how, under such circumstances, they can hope for happiness passes my understanding.

"It just goes to show, I think, that the love such people have is very small, not the grand passion, the overpowering devotion of a great soul, as they like to imagine it is. Hurt vainly, smarting pride and the fiendish desire to hurt in return are more responsible for the marriage from pique than any 'heart wounds' either man or woman may feel.

"The man who has tried his best to win the one woman in the world and failed; the woman who has given her best to a man who proves himself false, will not be in any hurry to bind themselves by marriage vows to another person.

"Such fatal steps—and they nearly always are fatal—show suffering self-conceit rather than a broken heart—an error into which those who are only half in love fall.

"The man squares up his shoulders and says, 'Well, maybe I won't show that girl a thing or two!' The girl tosses her pretty head, pins on a saucy little bow of ribbon or dons a new frock and fares forth, vowing that she'll just show that man how little she really cared.

"The man is a wonderful help to a tired man. All the little attent

CYNTHIA'S ADVENTURE THE LOST UMBRELLA

By F. FOGARTY.

Tears gathered in the eyes of Cynthia Thomas as she gazed down at the little garden in the back yard of the house adjoining that in which she occupied the smallest room on the top floor.

Cynthia was going away—although she knew of no place to go. She had eaten nothing for two days, and was hungry.

A recent interview with her landlady had not been a pleasant one—the shame of it was responsible for her tears. Landladies cannot wait more than four weeks for their room rent, and Cynthia had not paid hers for five. Even now there seemed no possibility of its being paid for five more weeks.

So she said goodby to the little garden and looked about her room in vain for something she could pawn. There was nothing left—nothing but her clothes, and those she must keep so that she might look respectable even if the river had to be the solution of her problem.

During the first few weeks after she had lost her position on the News Cynthia had rather enjoyed the experience of "hard luck." It had broadened her, developed her insight into life, she thought. But the endless round of visits to city editors asking for a job, then the search for any kind of work ended fruitlessly, her money gone, and that curious gnawing sensation, with a light-headed faintness, was an entirely different matter.

Blindly she walked down Broadway, stumbling as she crossed the intersecting streets. Presently she met the eyes of a handsome, well-dressed young man, a stranger, who lifted his hat with a smiling "Good evening."

"Good evening," said Cynthia, before she was really aware what had occurred.

"May I ask where you are going?" politely inquired the stranger.

"I'm going to dinner," she announced firmly, with her head held proudly erect.

"May I beg that you will take pity on me—and dine with me?" asked the man as he stood in front of her, hat in hand. "I am a stranger in the city—and lonely. I ask you to grant my request, as a beggar would ask for alms. Won't you give me the pleasure of your company for an hour while we dine?"

Cynthia looked him squarely in the eyes—eyes that met hers with frank straightforwardness. "Thank you," she said with quiet dignity. "I will dine with you with pleasure. I have not dined for two days."

He looked at her with a start and his eyes read the truth in the face before him. Quickly he guided her to a quiet restaurant not very far away, where they found a table for two near an open window.

For two hours they chatted pleasantly, lingering over the dinner.

Cynthia liked the man. They were congenial companions. If only she had met him in another way. She could not continue an acquaintance formed thus.

"What shall we do next?" he inquired cheerfully. "It's too hot for the theater. Shall we take a drive by the river side? It's early and we can be back by ten if you wish."

This proposition fitted in with her half-formed plan; so she agreed.

"I will wait in the reception room while you order the taxi," she murmured; but as soon as she saw him disappear down the corridor she hastily scribbled a note at the writing table and gave it to the maid, with instructions to hand it to the gentleman when he returned.

"You have probably saved my life. Thank you—and goodby," it read.

The next minute pedestrians on Thirty-fifth street were amazed at the sight of a stylishly gowned young woman running swiftly along that quiet thoroughfare.

Was it fate that sent her directly into the arms of Mrs. Forbes, the society editor on the Star, and the one woman in all New York that she knew at all well?

"Cynthia, child, whatever is the trouble?" asked that kind soul, as she caught the excited girl by the arm and faced her about in the direction she was going.

"Oh, Mrs. Forbes, they told me you were out of town."

"I was. Just got back an hour ago." Then between little gasps of laughter and tears, Cynthia told her story to the sympathetic woman by her side.

"You are to stay with me tonight, Cynthia; and tomorrow I'll introduce you to our managing editor. He is looking for some one to report women club news, and I'm sure you can land the job. At any rate, we'll try."

"Now you must get to bed. You are all worn out and nervous," continued the motherly little woman, as she led the way up the steps of an apartment house where her own rooms were the daintiest and coziest in the building.

In her dreams Cynthia saw the gray eyes of her dinner companion and wondered if ever again she would look into their kindly depths.

What Was the Text?

Domestic Amenities.

"When Mrs. Tribble loses her temper she calls Mr. Tribble a worm." "What does Mr. Tribble do?" "He answers, 'Madam, you can't bait me!'"

By CLARA CURTRIGHT.

She was young, tall, dignified and well dressed, and as she entered the elevated train and demurely slipped into the only vacant seat Wagstaff, covertly watching her over the edge of his newspaper, decided that she was a rare girl, indeed.

He kept taking one more look at the girl; her attention being centered upon a book. By the time the train reached his station he was deeply interested in her. He vaguely remembered having seen her on his morning train at intervals, but never before had she sat within the direct range of his vision.

The next morning he took special pains to catch that same train. Mifflin was sitting near the door of the car and dragged him into a seat beside him. However, Wagstaff lost all interest in Mifflin's baseball chatter as the train neared the station where the girl had entered on the previous morning. He craned his neck to scan the waiting passengers on the platform. Mifflin looked at him curiously.

"Expecting somebody to get on here?" Mifflin asked.

"Oh, no," Wagstaff said hastily. "I thought I saw some one I knew."

Then, to his unmeasured delight, the girl came demurely in with the crowd and found a seat almost opposite them. Mifflin followed Wagstaff's enraptured glance.

"Is that the party you thought you knew?" he asked.

"Well, no," Wagstaff said guiltily, "but I wouldn't mind."

After that it got to be a regular thing every morning for Wagstaff to watch for the girl and then to steal glances at her all the way to his station. She looked at him so calmly in gazing around the car day after day that he thought despairingly that she didn't know he was on earth.

Just when he was losing hope of ever getting acquainted with her something happened. One morning she got off at a station which the train reached before it arrived at Wagstaff's. More than that, Wagstaff saw a long handled umbrella resting against the window frame of the seat that she had just left.

"What shall I do?" the young man asked himself. "Shall I take her umbrella with me for safe keeping, or shall I turn it in at the lost and found office? In either case—"

With a fast beating heart he possessed himself of the forgotten umbrella. On mature consideration he decided that it would be best to turn it in to the company in the usual way and take a chance on future favorable developments.

A week later the developments came: On a wind-swept elevated platform one evening, several stations distant from the one nearest his office, Wagstaff found himself alone with the girl.

For an instant her glance lingered, and there was a sort of recognition in it as their eyes met. Wagstaff acted on the moment's impulse, all the hero in his makeup coming to the front.

"I beg your pardon," he said, advancing a step, hat in hand, "but did you recover the umbrella you left on the train a few days ago? I turned it in at the lost and found department—"

She started a little with surprise as he spoke, and then she smiled graciously. "Why, yes, thank you," she said. "I—I got it. Was it you who found it? It was awfully good of you."

"Not at all," declared Wagstaff.

Just then the train came in and he helped her aboard. They sat down together and their acquaintance prospered.

In ten minutes he found that she knew half a dozen of his own friends. While things were a little bit unconventional, she concluded finally that he might call.

Wagstaff called and found two of the friends there to vouch for him. Then he took pains to call again when he was certain the friends wouldn't be there. Since the girl chose the time for the call it is possible that she didn't want them there either.

Two or three months later as she and Wagstaff were standing in her front hall one night counting the hooks on the hatrack and otherwise enjoying themselves, the girl said: "Billy, I've heard of a lot of ways that young men get acquainted with girls they want to meet, but that umbrella of yours makes a hit with me every time I think of it."

"What do you mean?" Wagstaff asked a bit feebly.

"Why, you innocent child," she said, smiling, "I never lost any umbrella on the elevated train!"—Chicago Daily News.

He Tipped Again.

He was very affable and free with his opinions, was this young man, but that was about all he was free with. To the man who had carried his not unheavy bag to the little countryside station he had given one whole penny.

Notwithstanding the forlorn look on the man's face, he still continued to chat in an easy manner.

"I shall never forget," he continued, "the splendor of the scenery when I was in Switzerland. It was an education to see the sun rise, tipping the little blue hills with gold—"

"Ah!" interrupted the man who had tolled with his bag. "Them hills was luckier than me, weren't they?"—London Tit-Bits.

SELF-SUPPORTING

Norman, Okla., Nov. 20.—While college days are perhaps the best part of the life of those who make use of the opportunities which an education affords, yet they are merely the silver lining for many dark clouds which lower on the horizon of most under-graduates. By far the larger number of the male students at the University of Oklahoma are in whole or in part self-supporting. With practically no assets except pluck and the determination to acquire a college education, hundreds of boys are working their way through the State University every year. The work ranges from the severest physical drudgery to service where the finest skill and talent are required.

The list of employments which furnish the young Oklahomans work whereby they may acquire the coveted college degree is in part as follows: Working on nearby farms; collecting and delivering student laundry; taking and selling pictures of games and other student attractions; waiting on tables and washing dishes at boarding or frat houses; tending furnaces, making beds and attending to rooms at rooming houses; doing janitor work at the

New England Romance.
From Boston comes the story of a touching phonograph romance. The manager of a store became infatuated with the voice of a young woman whose singing he heard reproduced frequently in the machines, wrote to her for her pictures, and the acquaintance speedily ripened into marriage. The bride, by the way, was intending to study in Paris for grand opera, but has decided to settle down in New England.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Are you doing as much business as you ought to be doing?

If not, why not try a stimulant?

The best stimulant under the blue skies of Heaven is advertising.

The best medium in this neck of woods is THE NEWS.

Best Exercise.

The best kind of exercise is the kind that makes you forget you are exercising—in other words, play, says a physician. It's a good scheme to have some more or less strenuous game for a hobby—golf or bowling or tennis or archery—anything that appeals to you and affords exercise with interest. But this is not saying that systematic exercise is not a good thing, too.

Thief-Proof Umbrella.

An umbrella made thief-proof by being locked in such a manner that it cannot be opened has been invented by a London cloak-room attendant. The locking device consists of a metal collar, one end of which may be slipped down over the rib-tips, and is securely locked to them by revolving the three metal rings. These rings bear the letters and numerals of the secret combination.

Pretty Compliment.

The Disraelis were visiting Stratfieldseye in the time of the old duke of Wellington. Going up to the bedroom, Disraeli found his wife and her maid moving the bed from one side of the room to the other. When he inquired the reason, his wife said: "Well, my dear, the duke sleeps on the other side of the wall, and if I lie against it I can boast that I have slept between the two greatest men in England."—San Francisco Argonaut.

Garrison's Philosophy

The truth that we utter is impalpable, yet real; it cannot be thrust down by brute force, nor pierced with a dagger, nor bribed with gold. . . . The cause that we espouse is the cause of human liberty, formidable to tyrants, and dear to the oppressed, throughout the world.—William Lloyd Garrison.

The Woman in the Case.

"Digby, you are worrying about some woman." "Biffles, I am." "I knew it! She is constantly in your thoughts." "I can't get her out of my mind." "I wouldn't dream of asking you to tell me her name." "I have no objections to letting you know her name. It is Mrs. Pruner, my landlady. I owe her for six months' board."

Really Hard Luck.

"Did youse git anything?" whispered the burglar on guard as his pal emerged from the window. "Naw, de bode wot lives here is a lawyer," replied the other in disgust. "Dat's hard luck," said the first; "did youse lose anyting?"—Ohio State Journal.

Europe's War Material.

Europe withdraws from industry 4,500,000 men to make soldiers of them. They are kept from one to three years. What an appalling waste; how doubly preposterous if efficiency can be insured with militia training;—New York World.

Birds Worthy of Gratitude.

It has been estimated that the birds in the United States save $200,000,000 worth of crops each year. The tree sparrows in Iowa eat 4,666 pounds of weed seed daily. One full-fledged robin will eat 16 feet of caterpillar daily, or about 4,569 individuals a month.

Advice to Alpine Climbers.

In the earlier part of the nineteenth century many even of those who had been up Alpine peaks themselves denounced the sport. Regarding the ascent of Mount Blanc, Murray's Handbook in the year 1838 stated that "all who have succeeded have advised no one to attempt it," and nearly 20 years later noted the "remarkable fact that a large proportion of those who have made this ascent have been persons of unsound mind."

Her Diagnosis.

Betsey, an old colored cook, was moaning around the kitchen one day, when her mistress asked her if she was ill. "No, ma'am, not 'zactly," said Betsey. "But the fac' is, I don't feel ambition 'nough to git outer my own way."—Exchange.

Not Really His Fault.

"I kept an eye on her until Saturday," said a seafaring man, referring to his wife, "and then she slipped her cable while I was on duty."

A WELL DEVELOPED SUMMER LOVE AFFAIR

"My sister Chrysse did more than disapprove of the whole affair," said the elder Miss Simpson. "Disapprove is too mild a word. She simply boiled over and started to pack her trunks. Then she unpacked them because, she said, she could not in justice to the family name leave me at the hotel unchaperoned.

"Chrysse is thirty-six, I am thirty-eight and neither of us ever had a chaperon in our lives—so I think it was nothing but sheer curiosity that made her remain at the summer resort with me. She wanted to see what I would do with Hendricks White. Chrysse has got tolerably used this summer to seeing me mixed up in other people's love affairs because they were always confiding in me or begging me to help them out—but it was rather a staggering blow to her when I produced a well developed love affair of my own."

"You would have thought it was a case of smallpox from her general attitude. She conquered her shock and repugnance only by heroic self-sacrifice and will power. There is something magnificent about the way Chrysse endures the presence of masculine beings on this earth. She disliked Hendricks White the instant he walked into the dining room. Hendricks is an old bachelor in the forties and a successful lawyer who barks at a jury and is used to seeing it witt before his eyes, so he has rather got into the habit of expecting everybody else to jump like the juries.

"What attracted me to him was the fact that he seemed to know instantly what he wanted, whether it was the choice of an ear of corn or an ear, and because he positively snorted in wrath when Libby Knox started to coo over him. Libby is a young woman of uncertain age who coos over every unattached man she sees. The general run of men like it, even if they say they don't—but she never tried it on Hendricks a second time. After his escape from her he planted himself on the other end of the porch settee that I was occupying and breathed hard as he glared at me. He knew I had seen the episode. Finally I laid down my work and laughed. I couldn't help it. A sort of harassed, tangled grin crept over his face. 'Here,' he hissed at me, 'why is a woman, anyhow? That is, some women?'

"A makeshift of nature to fill up vacant space," I told him, promptly. "I got that figured out a long time ago!" "After that we were great friends. And one day I went sailing with him in little catboat that he had rented. Chrysse said the idea of any man over twenty going sailing was pitiful. But I've decided that the best way to have a good time in this world is to take things the minute they present themselves—and I bribed the waiter at the hotel to put up some sandwiches and other things for me and took along a book and a bottle of ginger ale.

"An hour later, when I produced my little hamper and began unpacking things Hendricks said: 'You're the most sensible woman I ever met! I was just hating the idea of having to go back to the hotel for lunch on a day like this with a breeze just right. Any other woman would have thought of frills instead of sandwiches!'" "H'm! I murmured, argumentatively. "Speaking of frills—"

"Hendricks paused with his mouth full of sandwich to glare at me. 'They're all right,' he admitted. 'I don't see why all women can't wear white lawn dresses with drawn-work like that. But you always do look just right!'"

"My dress was white linen trimmed in Irish lace, but I forgave him. It was touching to see how he enjoyed being fed, and he positively purred at the ginger ale and the book.

"That's a book I've wanted to read all summer," he barked. "You read out loud and I'll keep the boat headed. Say, positively, I could grow quite fond of you, Miss Simpson, and I'm not partial to women, either."

"We had a lovely afternoon and when we started to sail back to the hotel we were surprised to find that the wind had died out completely. So we had to pole in. This process consists of standing in the stern of the boat and twisting one oar around in the water as though you were getting ready to wring it out and it is warrant to lay a strong man low in half a mile. Hendricks did two miles of it and I sat there and kept still while he growled and mopped his face and gasped for breath.

"It was when we landed that he seemed finally to remember me. He laid one hand on my shoulder—everybody at the hotel was inside at dinner—and he did not glare. 'Melanie,' he said, sharply, 'I want you to marry me! If you'd so much as opened your mouth to make a suggestion during those two horrible miles I'd have dropped you overboard, but as it is I love you desperately!'"

"That was why Chrysse stayed on—to see if I really was going to accept Hendricks' proposal. She is upstairs now with a bottle of smelling salts because I have just told her that I am."—Chicago Daily News.

Crisfield's Importance.

The collector of the port of Crisfield, Md., asserts that that place is the first port in the United States in the number of vessels registered. These vessels, however, include a large number of craft designated as "bugeyes, pungees, cutters and bateaus," so that the port's tonnage is not large. Crisfield is also described as the greatest hard and soft shell crab market in the world, and as the center of the Chesapeake bay oyster industry.

HAVING BAD LUCK WITH THE GARDEN

"What's that fuzzy-looking stuff out in your back yard?" asked the caller, curiously.

Her hostess glanced from the library window into a sad-looking garden and frowned. "Those," she informed her guest tartly, "are perennial sweet pinks."

"Pinks?" echoed the visitor, who lived in a suburb.

"As I said, they are pinks," repeated the hostess in a gloomy voice. "If you don't believe me you can look on the envelope the seeds came in. They came two years ago, but I have preserved the envelope in the drawer of the kitchen table for the specific purpose of convincing scoffers like you."

The caller laughed. "Were they ever pink?" she inquired.

"They were not," said the other passing a plate of sponge cake. "But, for the matter of that, my sweet William was not sweet and my forget-me-nots forgot to bloom and my climbing verbena grew into a bush."

"What a pity!" said the caller sympathetically. "You must have had uncommonly bad luck with your garden. We raised all the vegetables we could, eat this year."

"Oh, we raised vegetables, too, but we couldn't eat them," said the hostess. "You see, a vegetable garden is one of the joys we promised ourselves when we decided to stay in town this summer and save money. I got out the old grocery checks for last March and April and figured them over and found that what we paid for vegetables for those two months was 12 per cent. of our entire table expenses. So, of course, Edward and I estimated that by saving that 12 per cent. all during the summer we should have a lot of money to use in some other way."

"But," objected the visitor, "does that follow exactly? You know, vegetables are terribly high in March and April, because so many of them are hothouse grown."

"Oh, dear, yes," conceded the city keeper. "But I couldn't find the grocery bills so far back as summer of last year and, anyway, there was no harm done, because the more you think you're saving the happier you feel about it."

"So you planted vegetables?" prompted the caller.

"We did," answered her hostess. "We hired a gardener at $2 a day to put in the seeds because we thought it would pay to have it done scientifically. I found out afterward that the gardener was a tinsmith out of a job. The tinsmiths were having a strike, or something, and he was a union man, so, not being able to tin, he took to gardening to kill time. Possibly he wanted to get near to nature. But I think he must have had an unsympathetic disposition and then—well, probably they were nonunion seeds, because they came up a month later, looking as if they begrimed the effort."

The visitor appeared scandalized at the other's ignorance. "Of course, dear," she said, suavely, "you must have realized that it was due to the cold weather that your seeds didn't come up. You shouldn't have put them in until later."

"We put our potatoes in later," said the hostess, "and they grew so that Edward and I felt sure they, at least, would repay us for our trouble. I watered them twice a day and they grew four feet high." She sighed.

"Did they decay in the ground?" inquired the suburbanite.

"No, indeed," said her hostess. "There was nothing to decay. We had company to luncheon one day and I went out to our own potato patch to get some potatoes to bake. I was sure they must be ripe and had planned a special treat. I pulled up the stalks and dug a foot deep and sifted the ground and I got five potatoes the size of French peas."

She smiled ruefully. "And the cats ate our parsley," she added.

"I'm so sorry!" murmured the collector, with a superior smile, "but, after all, I suppose one can't expect much from a city garden. You'll have to come out to our little village to live and then you can enjoy your own garden stuff."

"I'm sure we should," assented the city dweller, politely, "but, you see, I've already resigned myself to buying our vegetables. They seem so cheap, now that I've tried raising things myself."

COTTON RECEIPTS

ALMOST 9,000

Cotton receipts are now nearing the 9,000 mark, the figures this afternoon standing at 8,697 bales. Of this 7,652 bales were received at the county yard and the 2,090 round bales, equal to 1,045 square bales, represents the season's output of the round bale gin.

The price has steadily advanced during the past few days, and some bales have sold on the street today for 12.25. It will be noted that cotton in Ada has brought Galveston prices all season, and some days have gone a shade better. This fact largely accounts for the popularity of Ada as a cotton market.

Members of the commission were assigned different features of the proposed bill and another meeting will be held here on December 27 at which time all parts will be assembled and prepared to be reported to the legislature.

An extreme penalty for violation of the provisions of the new bill will be one of the features. It is quite likely that the commission will adopt the governor's suggestion that a first, second and
